Editorial Comments.

Lexington got 1.07 inches of rain Wednesday.

The Methodist church has decided to locate at Atlanta. The University intended to rival Vanderbilt.

Senator Camden has found it advisable to deny a report that he recently bet $22,000 on one of his horses.

Mott Ayers, of Fulton, Ky., has moved to Laurel, Miss., and purchased a controlling interest in a daily paper there.

Mexican federalists swooped down on a little garrison of constitutionalists over the line from Columbus, N. Mex., and killed all of them, 30 in number.

O. M. Shelby and O. U. Gilmour, two young men at Clarksville, who went in the river bathing, had their pants stolen by hobsos and were left almost as scantily clad as a fashionably dressed woman.

David Barrow, Jr., aged 19, whose home was in Lexington, Ky., was drowned in a canoeing accident on Lake Michigan Wednesday afternoon and Edward Leavenworth, who was with him, had a narrow escape.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Hamlett has broken all records by fixing the 1914 school per capita at $4.50. This is 10 cents higher than ever before and an increase of 50 cents over 1913. Stick one more feather in Hamlett's cap.

The President has given to Carranza what amounts to an ultimatum. Should Carranza refuse to arrange for a peaceful settlement with Carbajal and insist on a forcible conquest of the capital, recognition will be denied his government and troops will remain at Vera Cruz until a government is recognized.

L. W. HENDERSON CRITICALLY ILL

At Jennie Stuart Hospital And Slight Hope For His Recovery.

Leslie W. Henderson, aged 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Henderson, was taken to the Jennie Stuart Hospital the first of the week very low with typhoid fever. His temperature run up to 105.5 degrees, and an operation was had for punctured bowels. The operation was successful and lower temperature followed and the patient was reported as perceptibly better Thursday and hope of his recovery was revived. He had a bad night Thursday night and yesterday his condition was more unfavorable and the outcome is watched with great anxiety by the young man's many friends. He is one of the most exemplary young men in the city. He has for years been secretary of the Baptist Sunday School and cornetist in the church orchestra. At the prayer meeting Wednesday night, practically the whole services were a series of prayers for his recovery.

Mr. Henderson is a past chancellor of Evergreen Lodge Knights of Pythias, and a most popular member of that order.

He is shipping clerk in the lumber office of the Forbes Mfg. Co., and a most valued employee of that company.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING Fell Dead While Removing Clothes From a Metal Line.

During the storm Thursday morning, at the home of his parents near Cate's Mill, Cozy Cary, a colored boy aged 15 years, a son of Bob Cary, was instantly killed by lightning. The boy went out to take in some clothes from a metal clothes line and when his hands touched the wire the current entered his body and he fell dead.

REMODELING BUSY STORE

Four Single Store Rooms To Be Changed Into Big Department Store.

IMPROVEMENTS UNDER WAY.

Building Enlarged and Equipped With Every Modern Device For Convenience.

One of the most extensive building changes of the year has been undertaken by Frankel's Busy Store and is now under way. The whole of the building now occupied by them is to be remodeled and the whole building is to be of completely modern design and structure. Definite plans have not yet been finished, but the general outline which the changes will follow has been decided upon.

The front of the store is to be of brown hytex brick. There will also be 70 feet of glass show windows. The new front is to be entirely different from the old one and none of the old material will be used. Two large spacious doors will open into the street instead of the four separate store doors now used. The plan of the main floor is to be greatly changed, making the store rooms on the first floor more serviceable and able to carry a much larger stock. On the left will remain the large dry goods department and the main business office.

This main store room will be about 18 ft. by 140 ft. in size.

The right side of the main floor will be used for the shoe store. The gent's ready-to-wear department will be moved into a large basement, in which an extensive line of men's clothing will be kept.

On the second floor the ladies' ready-to-wear and millinery departments will have their rooms. Many changes will be made in these departments. There will be an elevator put in to carry shoppers from the different floors. This elevator is to be large and handsome and one of the latest models. On the second floor there will also be a ladies' rest room. The third floor will be used as a stock room.

Work on the excavations for the basement has already been started and the improvements on the other parts of the store building will be taken up as the work progresses. The west wall of the store will be moved about 48 feet further back, thus adding much more room to the store room.

All the improvements will be the most modern ones and the whole building will be fitted up as an up-to-date Department store.

The contract has been let to the Forbes Manufacturing Co., and the work is expected to be entirely completed by about the fifteenth of October.

In order to clear the stock so that the work of the contractors may proceed without interruption, a big Rebuilding Sale will be started, beginning Thursday, July 23.

None of the departments will be closed during the process of rebuilding, but probably the stock will be shifted from the different store rooms in order that both the building and the business may continue.

TORNADO

Henderson, Ky., Scene of Bad Storm—Heavy Damage and Lights Out.

Henderson, Ky., July 17.—Two persons were killed, several others injured and scores of buildings damaged when a tornado struck this city late Thursday. It is estimated damage will reach $150,000. The city light plant was partly destroyed and the city is in darkness.

The dead are Mrs. William Sewell and her 13-year-old nephew, Bonnie Prior. Both were crushed to death when a three-story brick building was blown over on their home.

BRYAN FOR SUFFRAGETTS

Issues Formal Statement Defining Position of Suffrage Question.

IS FOR STATE AMENDMENT.

Supports Nebraska's Proposed Law--Reasons for His Faith.

Washington, July 17.—Secretary Bryan, in a formal statement came out for woman suffrage. He declared he would ask no political right for himself he was not willing to grant his wife, and announced he would support the proposed state constitutional amendment extending the franchise to women to be voted on in Nebraska next November.

Woman, Mr. Bryan said, had proved herself equal to every responsibility imposed on her, and would not fail society in this emergency. Above all other arguments for giving her the ballot, he placed the right of the mother to a voice in the molding of the environment of her children.

Universalist Church.

Services at the Universalist church Sunday 8 p. m. Subject—"The Divine Paternity." This will be the last preaching service until the first Sunday in September, as the pastor will be away on his vacation all through August. We hope to see all our friends present at this service and strangers all always welcome.

DROUTH IS NOW ENDED

Hopkinsville Gets 1.40 Inches Of Soaking Rains Just In Time.

NOT YET GENERAL RAINS.

Intense Heat Has Given Way To Pleasant Summer Weather.

At last it may be announced that the drouth, so far as Hopkinsville is concerned, has been broken by good rains. While the different showers extended into parts of the county, there has been no general rain all over the county. The first shower fell Thursday morning at 7:40 and it rained steadily for 30 minutes. There were several sprinkles during the day and another good rain during Thursday night.

The rainfall brought further relief by lowering the intense heat that had prevailed for a week.

Observer W. F. Randle's report for the week is as follows:

	Maximum	Minimum.
Sunday.....	106	72
Monday.....	102	75
Tuesday.....	99	70
Wednesday.....	90	74
Thursday.....	85	72

The rainfall Thursday was 1.40 inches. The two little showers last week were .35 of an inch, so we have had since July 1, 1.75 inches. Previous to this, the last showers were on June 9 and June 17.

Hopkinsville has fared better than some parts of the county. The June rains missed most of the southern part altogether. The rains Thursday did not extend far to the south. The western and northern parts of the county got good showers. There was a light shower in eastern Trigg and Pembroke was not altogether overlooked by the weather clerk.

The rains have come too late to increase the acreage of tobacco. About all the farmers can do will be to replant the small acreage planted by watering, as the stand is very bad.

The corn crops will be immensely benefited and pastures and gardens will be saved from drying up. The prospects are good for more rain and many sections of the state have shared in the showers.

LIGHTNING FATAL RESULT

Man Killed, Little Girl Injured When Gun Is Discharged in Burning Home.

Whiteville, Tenn., July 17.—John Burford was killed Wednesday when lightning struck his home during a storm. His little girl may also die as the result of the catastrophe.

The lightning set the house on fire and the heat discharged a gun, the bullet entering the body of the little girl. Doctors have little hope for her recovery.

HUERTA STEPS DOWN

According to 'Program' And Seeks Safety In Flight.

CARBAJAL HOLDS THE BAG.

First Practical Step Towards Settlement of The Mexican Trouble.

Mexico City, July 15.—Victoriano Huerta resigned from the provisional presidency of the Mexican republic tonight and his resignation was accepted by the senate and chamber of deputies by a vote of 121 to 17.

Francisco Carbajal then was appointed president and took the oath of office at the joint session of the deputies and senators.

Huerta's resignation was submitted through the department of foreign relations. It was read in the house and was greeted with cries of "Viva Huerta!" It then was referred to the joint committee of government. After a brief consideration the committee reported, accepting the resignation in the following terms:

"Article 1.—We accept the resignation presented by Gen. Victoriano Huerta as president of the Mexican United States.

"Article 2.—We call Licentiate Francisco Carbajal, minister of foreign relations, to assume the presidency."

A ballot was taken and the joint session approved the report.

President Carbajal proceeded to the national palace under an escort of presidential guards, and all along the way was greeted with tumultuous cheering.

Gen. Huerta and Gen. Blanquet left the capital to-night. They boarded a train on the Mexican railway a few miles beyond the city. It is thought they are going to Puerto Mexico.

Carbajal Ready to Quit.

Washington, July 17.—Francisco Carbajal, successor to Gen. Huerta as provisional president of Mexico, Thursday advised the United States government informally that he intended to retire in favor of Gen. Carranza, the constitutional chief. Mr. Carbajal wishes only that a general amnesty be proclaimed and protection given to the property of those who opposed the constitutionalists.

This statement, together with the announcement from Monterey that Carranza was willing to enter into negotiations with Carbajal relative to the transfer of authority at Mexico City, was regarded here tonight as assuring the restoration of peace in Mexico.

The views of Mr. Carbajal were explained in detail to Secretary Bryan today by Jose Castellot, former member of the Mexican senate, who had received a personal telegram through the Mexican embassy. It was the first communication between the American government and the Carbajal administration. The message incidentally revealed that Generals Huerta and Blanquet, now en route to Puerto Mexico, are planning to go to Europe. The communication, addressed to Mr. Castellot, a personal friend of the new president, was dated last night and was as follows:

"I have just taken the oath of office as president of the republic. Generals Huerta and Blanquet departed tonight for Europe. I desire to make it known with emphasis that my only purpose is to facilitate a solution of the grave problems which weigh upon our country. I have not the slightest ambition for myself and merely wish to terminate the internal conflict of our country. Please give me your impressions of the situation in Washington. (Signed)

"FRANCISCO CARBAJAL." This message, Mr. Castellot explained, meant that Mr. Carbajal had taken office only as a means of bridging the gap from the Huerta regime to the constitutional Lassen Peak is still in eruption, but Huerta has quieted down.

Black rust reports from Minnesota and Dakota caused a slight rally in wheat at Chicago Wednesday, July wheat closing at 78½ cents.

Mayor Buschmeyer has appointed G. W. Wetterer, secretary of the Louisville Trust Co., controller to succeed S. M. White, the defaulter.

W. P. Thorne, Jr., formerly of Eminence, has landed a comfortable berth as a California postmaster, where the salary attached is a reasonably good one.

timated to be 250,000 years old, has

Pleocene deposit of the famous tar pits of La Brea.

Only the bloodthirstiness of the Constitutionalists now stands between Mexico and peace, Carbajal, the successor of Huerta, is a judge and not a soldier. He will seek to arrange for the peaceful transfer of the government to Carranza with certain guaranties of general amnesty and the protection of property.

Mr. Wood several times across the shoulders. They were both arrested.

Secretary Bryan has outlined to

There will be twenty in all. One

The Lea-Stahlman controversy in Nashville has reached a white heat.
Col. E. B. Stahlman in the Banner

ilege.

Rev. J. D. Gwaltney in resigning the pastorate of the Central Baptist church, at Winchester, gave out an interview in which he said, "This is the worst age in the history of the world." There is not much patience anywhere for the pessimist who wears nothing but blue goggles. We commend to Bro. Gwaltney the verse:
"Two men looked through prison

One saw mud, the other saw stars,
In this alone the reason's found,
One looked up and the other looked

KITTY'S LUCKY DAY

By CLAUD GERVAISE.

Kitty Sanders kept the bellboy waiting a full four minutes while she deliberated over the hastily written note which he had brought her.
Considering the heat of the stuffy little hotel bedroom, the invitation it contained was doubly alluring.

"Don't you want a breath of country air?" it read. "I know where we can get lots of it and a good country dinner, too. Please come, won't you?
Yours most hopefully, Jimmie Dulin."

The bellboy was moving about uneasily. He had been standing at least five minutes now and it seemed to him that the pretty young girl with the very black hair and the very blue eyes was slow of decision. Suddenly, however, she spoke.

"You can tell Mr. Dulin that I'll be down in the hotel office in a quarter of an hour," she said, and then she fairly shoved the small messenger out of the room for fear that she would change her mind.

For she couldn't help owning that what she was about to do was a rather unconventional thing, this going for a jaunt into the country with a man to whom she had never been formally introduced. And the fact that she had been in vaudeville for some four years and had never before dreamed of accepting an invitation from a traveling man she did not know did not make it any the easier.

She argued with herself all the time that she was arranging her hair and hat. It was different this time. Jimmie Dulin had been "making" the same towns with her for over six months now. Again and again she had seen him on the streets run across him in hotel offices. In fact, she had even picked him out in various audiences when the theater was sufficiently empty to allow of easy recognition of friends.

He was standing by the desk waiting for her and he held out his hand in cordial greeting.

"I'm awfully glad that you'd come," he said. "I thought at luncheon you looked as though a taste of the country would agree with you mightily. But it took me some hours to get my nerve to the asking point."

Kitty laughed happily, and returned his confidence promptly.

"Same here, Mr. Dulin. It took me some minutes to set my nerves to the accepting point. But I was so dreadfully lonesome that my scruples just seemed to vanish away."

Jimmie Dulin nodded understandingly. "I know how you feel, and lonesomeness isn't any fun. The queer part of it is that you don't get over it with the years. How long have you been tramping it?" he asked.

"About four years. I went into the work because singing and dancing were the easiest things that I did, and I have stayed in it because they are the only things that I can make any money at. Of course, it's worse some times than others. Often I have friends playing on the same bill with me, or, again, there are nice people with whom I get acquainted.
For the last four weeks, though, it's been just dreadful.

They talked on, one subject leading naturally enough to another.
Jimmie Dulin seemed in a most confidential frame of mind, and Kitty was an absorbed listener.

"You know I am not going to keep at this sort of wandering much longer. At the end of this year I'm through with it all, and it's the quiet business life in some small town for me."

"What are you going to do?"
They had come to a small cottage now. It was all white and green and stood back from the walk.

"Why, I am going to build some such place as this and run a retail store in some such town as this." He stopped short. "This is where we are going to get that home-cooked country dinner I promised you. A distant relative of mine lives here and her home is always open to me and my friends whenever I am in this town."

The woman that answered the doorbell had such a merry pair of eyes and such an all-embracing smile of welcome that Kitty felt at home at once.

"You folks are a little early for that fried chicken you smell," she laughed. "But just make yourselves comfortable out on that side porch till the gravy gets mixed and the coffee boils."

At dinner it was the aunt who was the mirth of the occasion. She was a woman long past fifty, but her laughter was as contagious as that of a girl's and the reminiscences she told of Jimmie's boyhood made Kitty feel as though she were already an old-time friend.

"It's awfully lucky that I don't have the chance to eat like this every day," said Kitty as she finished her last of her cherry pie and shook her head reluctantly over the impossibility of devouring the other piece till on the plate. "I would have to give up singing and dancing for a living."

Afterward Kitty insisted on helping with the dishes, and as Jimmie announced that he was going to be her side partner, the aunt was forced to retire to the porch.

"My, but you sure do look a picture in that pink apron," Jimmie exclaimed ardently. He was plainly too absorbed in Kitty to be of much practical help to her.

"Is it more becoming than my dancing dress?" she asked.

"A thousand times so! Why I could just—"

But what he could have done was never told. A crash of a huge platter interrupted. Kitty had dropped the dish she had in her hands, and chicken and gravy and potatoes all fell on the immaculately scrubbed floor, a broken platter on top of them.

"Say—don't you worry over all that," Jimmie said for the hundredth time. The damage had been repaired to the best of their ability, and they were watching the sun go down over the wide stretch of hills at the side of the house.

"But I am going to send your aunt another platter. I have taken a piece with me and I am going to have one made if I cannot get a similar one."

"Now, don't be silly," protested Jimmie, vigorously.

"But I am."

"Now, listen to me," Jimmie made a desperate effort at quietness of manner.

"You see, it doesn't make as much difference as you think. This house is mine and not my aunt's, and everything that's in it belongs to me."

"Your house?" Kitty's question was almost a gasp.

"Sure it's mine. So you have nothing at all to worry you, and I hardly think that it's up to you to re-furnish my establishment even if a trifling accident did happen when I had invited you to dinner."

"But I don't understand how it's all yours and furnished so beautifully."

"Do you think it is beautiful?"
he asked her eagerly.

"Yes, of course it's very beautiful and lovely—but I just don't understand," she repeated.

His face grew serious.

"Well, you see," he said slowly. "I was to have been married a year ago this time. I had the house all ready and everything in apple-pie order.
Then the very day before the wedding the girl came down with fever —over-exhaustion and strain—and she died in a few days. The house has never been used, and as it seemed too bad to have it stand idle I told my aunt to come here and use it till I wanted it again. Now, since I have seen—"

But he was interrupted a second time. His aunt had joined them on the porch.

"Now you are both of you to come back here tomorrow evening for dinner at the same time," she said, in a tone that admitted of no disputing.

"For I am going to be very hurt if Jimmie doesn't give me more of his time the rest of the week, and I know Miss Sanders will bring him here if he won't come of his own accord."

Jimmie turned to Kitty. "Will you come tomorrow?"

"Yes, I'd love to," she responded promptly.

"Tomorrow at five, then."

"We'll be here on the dot of the hour," laughed Jimmie happily, and Kitty nodded her assent as they ran down the broad cottage steps and started to take the road which led back to town.

"She's a dear girl," said the aunt to herself, as she stood watching the two disappear around the turn in the road a half-mile beyond. Her eyes had a smile of understanding in them. "Jimmie deserves to be happy.
After all his disappointments, and I hope he gets her and brings her here right soon."

Church, State and Poor.

A book on "The Church, the State and the Poor" has been written by an English vicar. The book is comprehensive, tracing the subject of pre-formation days. The author regrets that during the growth of collectivism, under which he classifies what is called "Christian socialism," the church has trusted too much to the state to better the conditions among the poor. Now there is a revival of interest in the welfare of the poor on the part of the church. The writer's contention is that a firm belief in the Christian creed is the only inspiration and guide to any effort to solve "the social problem."

Snake Swallows Indian.

Rev. Thomas J. McCormick, assistant director of the New York diocesan branch of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, has received a letter from Father Hood, a missionary in India. The letter describes how a dealer in molasses on his way home from Rangpur, went to sleep at night curled up in the road under his cart, and was swallowed whole by a hungry python.

The snake, which was killed later, measured twenty-nine feet in length.

HUG AND KISS.

Ceremony that Allows Judges to Separate Jeweler From Wife and $7,200 a Year Alimony.

New York.—That a wedding solemnized with a kiss and a hug is sufficient to justify the award of $7,200 a year alimony was shown in the grant of that sum this week by Mrs. Emma L. Hall. She obtained a separation in March from her husband, a wealthy diamond dealer.

Hall admitted he had lived with Mrs. Hall for 12 years, but never recognized her as his wife, and denied there had been any marriage ceremony.

Mrs. Hall testified at the trial that Hall placed his arm about her waist, kissed her and said: "This is sacred and binding a marriage ritual as any other."

Justice Greenbaum decided the ceremony was binding and awarded Mrs. Hall a separation.

The court ordered Hall to pay the alimony in monthly installments of $600 and to furnish $15,000 security to insure its payment.

Mrs. Hall testified at the trial that Hall wore diamonds on his suspenders, on his garters, in his shirt front and even had a large diamond in the button that held the neckpiece of his overcoat together.

Hall also had his pockets full of diamonds of all kinds, Mrs. Hall testified, and often exhibited handfuls of them to prospective buyers.

GEN. YOUNG'S STRONG APPEAL

Tells of The Work He Has Done
For Western Kentucky
And Christian Co.

To the Democratic Voters of Christian, Todd, and adjoining counties:

* Four years since General S. B. Buckner became President of the Jefferson Davis Home Association. The object of this enterprise was to purchase the birth place of Mr. Davis at Fairview and build on it a suitable memorial to this great man.

After being the head of the Association for a short time General Buckner sent for me and said he was unable to do the active work and urged me to take his place. This I finally did, but with reluctance.

Options were held on 19 acres of land at Fairview. The Association had no funds to close the options. The chance to buy the land was about to be lost. I advanced five thousand dollars to save the property for the use to which it is now dedicated. By the aid of the Board of Directors and the liberality of Southern people, about $16,000 has been raised. The money I advanced was returned to me. A beautiful park of 20 acres has been laid out called "Jefferson Davis Park," a handsome stone wall built around two sides of the enclosure. The State of Kentucky appropriated $18,000 to help build the wall and there is still an unpaid appropriation of $5,000 to erect a memorial to Mr. Davis.

This Park is now one of the historic spots in America. The men of the North had marked the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln in Larue County and the men of the South felt that the birthplace of Jefferson Davis was equally dear to the men and women of the South. This park is a center for the Jeff Davis Highway, which will be 300 miles long, passing through Christian, Warren, Todd, Trigg, Lyon, Caldwell, Calloway, McCracken, Marshall, Simpson and Logan Counties, and will be when completed and connected up one of the most beautiful highways in the United States and at the same time one of the greatest monuments named for an American.

I have agreed to furnish a shade tree every 50 feet along the highway, requiring something like 60,000 trees. When these shall be grown this Jefferson Davis Highway will not be surpassed in beauty by any similar road in the world. I have attended at my own expense three of the meetings in the counties to organize and encourage the building of this road.

For forty-two years I have been an earnest Democrat and have made more Democratic speeches than any man in Kentucky who has never sought or held an office. I have gone wherever and whenever the party manager asked me to speak and always at my own expense. My Democracy has no break in it.

I am anxious to round out my life by a brief service of ninety days in the United States Senate. This is the only office I will ever hold. The gentlemen opposing me are younger. They can afford to wait; I cannot. Am I asking too much of the people who live around this birthplace to give me their votes for this short period in the Senate. Have I not the right to expect the solid vote of Christian and the other counties along this highway?

Lunatics Defeat Trentonites.

A team made up of the employees of the Western State Hospital defeated the fast Trenton team Thursday by a score of 6 to 3. Dr. Robertson twirled for the Asylum and did swell work on the slab. COLLISION ON MAIN STREET

Between Auto and Vehicle and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Lindsay say Hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Lindsay, of Madisonville, were struck by Dr. F. P. Thomas' automobile at 10:10 o'clock Thursday night and sustained bruises, but no very serious injuries. They had spent the day in the city as the guests of the family of Mr. Lindsay's brother-in-law, Mr. Will Kimmons, and were making the 10:20 train in a vehicle belonging to Gray's livery stable, in which they had been driving with Mr. and Mrs. Kimmons earlier in the evening.

At the intersection of Main and Eleventh street the collision occurred. Dr. Thomas was coming up the street at a moderate rate in the middle of the street. Mr. Lindsay was driving down town near the east curbing, under the trees in front of the Forbes Company's office. It was raining, and the glare of the headlights caused both parties to misjudge the distance, it is supposed, and the surrey was hit by the automobile. Dr. Thomas stopped the auto instantly and at once took charge of the situation. Mrs. Lindsay was thrown out of the surrey and fell with such force that she was for awhile unconscious. Mr. Lindsay sustained two painful cuts, one on his forehead and the other on his hip. They are not at all dangerous. Dr. Thomas took them in his auto to the Jennie Stuart Hospital where their injuries were dressed and yesterday morning they were practically over the effects, except that Mr. Lindsay's leg was paining him considerably.

In the accident the surrey had the shafts broken off and was otherwise damaged. The horse was not hurt.

Out Door Sleeping.

Never in the history of Trigg county has out of doors sleeping been so popular as it is now. The torrid nights of the past two months, when one simply cannot woo the god of sleep in a room, have literally driven hundreds of residents in town and country into the yards and on the porches. People who have never slept out of doors until this summer have moved their cots onto the porches, and where that was not convenient, or a better breeze could be obtained by doing so, have gone right out into the yards. The habit is quite a common one in the country. One can drive along the country roads early in the morning and notice cots upon the porches everywhere. People who are sleeping out of doors declare that in spite of the heat of the day, they feel refreshed and invigorated; that there is no comparison of the comfort of out door sleeping and that in the house. These long hot nights, when one cannot sleep in the house, are very comfortable on a cot beneath the stars.—Cadiz Record.

Institution for White Teachers.

The Institute for white teachers of Christian county will be held from August 31st to September 5th, in Hopkinsville. Prof. M. A. Leiper, of Bowling Green, will conduct the Institute, assisted by Prof. J. W. Marion, B. F. Brown and Superintendent L. E. Foster. Quite a little departmental work will be done, and teachers of the county will be called upon to take an active part. Remember the date and make your plans to attend.

Prayers for Rain.

Evansville, Ind., July 7.—Prayers were offered in St. Agnes Catholic church at Uniontown, Ky., yesterday for rain. Similar services were also held in other churches. The crops in Western Kentucky are literally drying up for the want of rain. The drouth is the most severe in many years.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong." — Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.
In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

KENTUCKY TOBACCO BELOW ESTIMATE.

Louisville, Ky., July 17.—According to authoritative estimates this year's tobacco crop in Kentucky will be from twenty to twenty-five per cent shorter than was at first expected. It is now quite certain the intended crop will never be set out, as the rains which have fallen in a good many of the tobacco districts in the last several days were in time to greatly benefit the weed that is already planted, but too late to make possible further planting. On the tobacco breaks trading is extremely dull, and it is generally admitted among local tobacco men that the trade is nearing a new record for slowness. Prices, however, seem to hold their own, despite this fact. The demand is about equal to the small business being done. Range of today's market was: New burley, $3 to $15; old burley, $2.60 to $10.75, and new dark from $5.25 to $11.25.

O. G. SPROUSE COMPANY

Files Petition In Bankruptcy, Naming H. T. Stratton
as Receiver.

The O. G. Sprouse Company, one Springfield's oldest and biggest concerns, on Tuesday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and H. T. Stratton has been named as receiver. On account of the bankruptcy proceeding the O. G. Sprouse Company store is closed temporarily, but it is believed that arrangements will be made at once to resume business without long or serious interruption. It is practically certain that an adjustment of the affairs of this popular enterprise will shortly be secured which will not necessitate the firm going out of business.

The liabilities and assets are large and are said to be about an offset. The cause of the financial difficulty is attributable to several causes. The fire at Hopkinsville, branch store of the Sprouse Company several months ago, resulted in a serious loss to the concern, it is claimed, and added to this, short sales on account of the drouth conditions, together with poor collections on slow accounts, is said to be the cause of the firm's financial straits.

It was decided several weeks ago to close out the Hopkinsville branch store and consolidate the two houses in Springfield, and just this week the goods from the Kentucky town were received at the local store. It was the intention to conduct in the future a general dry goods and clothing business. It is still the purpose to carry out these plans when a readjustment of affairs is effected.—Springfield Herald.

Capt. J. W. Riley, of Newstead, yesterday shipped to P. W. Ray, of Bowling Green, two of his fine horses to be campaigned from now until the Pennyroyal Fair. They will be taken to the Mt. Sterling Fair next week and will be shown every week until the State Fair, where they will be entered.

"Nominee the Great," whose picture is here shown, will be entered

"Nominee the Great." for the $1,000 saddle stake. The mare, "Norma May," will be shown in the combined harness and saddle rings.

These horses are going to be hard to beat. Mr. Ray was here this week and looked them over and picked out "Nominee" as a sure winner. He took first honors at the Tennessee State Fair last year and swept the platter clean at the Pennyroyal Fair last fall. These horses will help to make up Mr. Ray's string and are sure to be heard wherever they are shown.

BARELY ESCAPE DROWNING.

Automobile Party Come Near Losing One Of Their Number.

A young man by the name of Kiuger, of Baton Rouge, La., and a member of an automobile party, came near losing his life by drowning in Cumberland river at Canton just after dark Monday evening. Mr. John B. Kiuger and three sons, of Baton Rouge, passed through Canton last Monday afternoon on the way home from a trip East. After crossing Cumberland river, they went in camp for the night. The boys went to the river and went in for a swim. One of the boys soon got into water over his head, and not being able to swim, began to sink. The father rushed in and saved him after a heroic struggle. The father left his pocket book in the struggle, containing about $30, which he failed to find. They went on their way Tuesday morning.—Caldwell Record.

DRASTIC ORDER OF HEALTH BOARD

All "Dead Carcasses" Must Be Burned or Buried Three Feet Deep.

The County Board of Health has issued an imperative order requiring all persons disposing of dead animals to either burn the carcasses or bury them not less than three feet deep and lime the carcass before covering it up. The Board threatens to prosecute those disobeying the order under the health laws. This will, it is expected, break up the practice of hauling carcasses into some field or woods to decay and perhaps prove a source of danger to the entire community.

The Commissioner of Agriculture has gone further and recommended the destruction of buzzards that feed upon carcasses. He says they carry infection, particularly of hog cholera, from place to place and add to the difficulty in eradicating the disease.

REMARKABLE MEETING GIVES AN IMPETUS TO STANLEY'S CAMPAIGN

Second District Congressman Addresses Vast Crowd of Supporters That Throngs National Theater

Louisville, Ky., July 6, 1914.—What was without a doubt one of the most remarkable political meetings ever held in Louisville was that last night when Congressman A. O. Stanley, of the Second district, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, presented his claims to the voters of the Fifth district at the National Theater.

The meeting was remarkable in that it was a distinct innovation, being probably the first time in the history of Louisville that a candidate for a Democratic State-wide nomination addressed a mass meeting of voters here, and, secondly, it was remarkable for the crowd which packed the theater auditorium, boxes, stage and a large part of the galleries. The crowd, which was estimated at 2,500, was decidedly one of the most representative assemblages that ever faced a speaker in Louisville, and not fifty persons left the theater from the time Mr. Stanley began until he closed his speech, which required an hour and a half to deliver. Many women graced the boxes, and they showed the keenest interest in what the speaker had to say.

Scathing Denunciation.

With keen shafts and rapier thrusts Mr. Stanley went after his opponent, Gov. J. C. W. Beckham and his aides, Percy Haly and Sam J. Shackelford, but he reached the climax in his denunciation of Richard W. Knott, editor of the Louisville Evening Post, as a political renegade and liar, who exerted a contaminating influence politically, socially and morally, and "whose relentless hate I wear as a badge of honor." For scathing denunciation nothing like it was ever heard in Louisville and the vast crowd roared its approval as he flung every shaft home. Mr. Stanley flattered Beckham for his alliance with Knott, whom he characterized as having condoned the assassination of Gov. William Goebel and had venomously assailed Democratic nominees. "This is the vile sheet," said he, "that has the insufferable impudence to dictate to the Democrats of Kentucky whom they shall choose as their Senator."

Where Does He Stand?

Charging Beckham with cowardice on the "wet" and "dry" question and playing the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde role on this issue as the exigencies of the situation demanded, Mr. Stanley demanded that Beckham come out in the open and declare to the people of Kentucky whether or not he favored nation-wide prohibition or State-wide prohibition, or both.

Mr. Stanley was greeted with a rousing ovation when he entered the theater and the demonstration lasted several minutes after he was introduced and before he was permitted to speak.

Introduced By Judge Edwards.

The meeting was presided over by Judge James P. Edwards, who introduced Mr. Stanley. "This splendid audience shows the handwriting on the wall," was Judge Edwards' opening sentence. He congratulated the Democratic party on its splendid administration of national and State affairs, and its ability to do things under the matchless leadership of a Woodrow Wilson. He congratulated the Democrats of Kentucky on having such a candidate for United States Senator as Augustus Owsley Stanley, who stands for every principle advocated by President Wilson and the National Democratic platform. Judge Edwards referred to the era of "machine rule" that was the chief characteristic of the "Beckham regime," and he paid his respects to Beckham, whose chief mouthpiece now was the "traitorous Louisville Post."

Full Text of Stanley's Speech.

Mr. Stanley's speech, which will well bear perusal, is in full as follows:

"You are assembled here on the eve of the exercise of a priceless privilege," began Mr. Stanley. "Vested with absolute and sovereign power, you sit in judgment upon the fitness of your public servants—a high tribunal, from whose decision there is no appeal. Learned judges, members of Congress, who aspire to posts of honor or distinction, must come to you, like a blind beggar with a cup.

"This is the only land, and you are the only people, where such a measure of liberty was ever enjoyed by the citizen.

"During 4,000 years and more of Christian and Pagan civilization men accepted, without protest, the monstrous political heresy that one man was born to be a king and another destined from his birth to be a vassal or a slave. That all power and all authority, liberty itself, is enjoyed by the grace of some royal grant came trickling down from the fetid steps of a throne upon a suppliant people below. It remained to the greatest mere man that was born of woman to turn his back upon the fallacies of the dead past and his face toward the future, and, with the audacity of genius, to declare that all men were created free and equal, with an equal right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. He took a mere man, because he was a man, just as God made him, without regard to his worth, his learning or his lineage, and made him the source of all power and all authority, clothed him with sacred and inalienable rights, armed him with a ballot and made him an uncrowned king, and before this towering creation of the mighty American the thrones of the world did tremble. I reverently thank God to-night that He who made us sovereigns all was the author of the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson.

"All that Jefferson and all that the wisdom and the courage of the fathers could do was to invest us with this supreme power. It remains for the people, and the people alone, to exercise it. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. No constitution, however perfect, no government, however flawless, can ever, or will ever, protect and preserve the liberties of a people who are not ceaselessly vigilant in the exercise of the power inherent in them.

Freedom of Kentucky.

"We loudly proclaim this a Government of and for and by the people. Is it such a Government here in Kentucky at this hour? Do the people of Kentucky exercise the actual control of their own affairs?

"The mere right to elect your officials, if it stops there, is not sufficient to constitute you a free people, or this a free Government.

"The Roman Emperors were all elected. Tiberius, Caligula or Nero could not have been more monstrous had they inherited the purple to which they were elected.

"To be free a people must do something more than elect officials. Those officials must, when elected, act through and for the people, whose servants they are.

"For that reason the members of the Legislature and of Congress are called representatives. They should be in very deed the willing and responsive medium through whom a sovereign people exercise their inherent authority.

"Now, what have you to do with the writing of the law which governs you? That law you must obey; violate the State or Federal statutes and you lose your liberty, your property or your life. What have you to do with the writing of those rules of conduct that touch you so nearly and upon which your liberty, your life and your property depend?

"A Legislature has but recently adjourned in the city of Frankfort. Had any citizen here appeared in the galleries of that body and objected to the passage of any bill then pending, he would have been ordered out of the House. Had he interrupted when the Federal Congress was considering some measure, he would probably have landed in jail.

"If the citizen has no voice in the actual writing of the law, what part, after all, has he in this so-called free government? He can participate in its operation in one way only, that is by having him who proposes to write or to execute the law to take the people into his confidence, tell them in advance candidly and courageously his position upon all public questions, and let them know exactly what he proposes to do, if intrusted with the high honors and stern obligations of a legislator.

"If the electors approve of his policies, if they desire to have him do the things which he proposes, then they commission him as their agent, their attorney, in fact, their actual representative, to write the laws for them. There, as a Senator from Kentucky, he writes with the hand of 200,000 Democrats; he speaks with the voice of 3,000,000 people.

Outside Interference.

"Here in Kentucky is the law written in obedience to your will, by men responsive to you alone. For weeks before the last Legislature assembled it was boldly proclaimed that private citizens, having no official relation to the Kentucky Legislature whatever, not members of that body, or intrusted with the law with the power to interfere with its deliberations—that a few private citizens would organize and control it, would suggest the men whom that body should elect as presiding officers, command it to the minutest detail, even to the selection of pages and cloakroom keepers; would sit in its secret caucuses and determine the policies of the party and the conduct of the lawmakers of a free people.

"The Governor of the State, upon whom the Constitution imposes the duty of advising this body, clothed with the right to veto measures which in his opinion were inexpedient or unconstitutional, with whom it was expected to act in concert, for the success of the party and the good of the country, depends upon harmony between the executive and the legislative branches of the government, that Governor's will was openly flouted, and those very men who exercised this power did not hesitate to boast that private citizens who had organized and controlled the Legislature, had come between that body and the people whose will they are supposed to express and obey.

"Whenever it occurs that either a Legislature or a Congress can be organized and rendered subservient to the will of a coterie of cunning and designing lobbyists and politicians, the interests of the people who elected them and this free government is a mockery, a delusion and a sham. That is invisible government. No interest was or ever will be able to corrupt or control a free people. No privileged interest, no lobbyist or corruptionist will ever be fool enough to attempt it. "It is only by breaking this beneficent and necessary concord between the public and the public servant that the powers of government are ever perverted to the plunder of a free people and the vile use of avaricious and designing men.

Sinister Control.

"This is the essence of that abominable thing known as invisible government. It was this secret and sinister control of the people's representatives and the people's government that hurled an effete Republicanism from power and that will bury it in deserved oblivion. A great jurist and a great statesman met the expectancy and gave voice to the will of a liberty-loving people when he demanded a new freedom, a freedom from invisible government, a freedom from interference by private interests with this country's control of its own affairs. It was that reiterated demand for this new freedom that made a college president in a State normally 50,000 Republican its Democratic Governor by a majority of 20,000. It was that same courageous cry heard by forty-eight States that made him the nominee of the Democratic party for the presidency.

"It was upon that issue that the Democratic party elected Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey. In the greatest speech of his life a few months before his nomination he declared: 'Now, what has been the matter? The matter has been that the Government of this country was privately controlled and that the business of this country was privately controlled; and that we did not have genuine representative Government, and that the people of this country did not have control of their own affairs.' And as to business, after a few committees like the Stanley Committee have gone on a little further we will know a good many particulars.

"And again: 'I make the assertion that the Government was privately controlled. I mean to put it specifically, that the Government of this country was managed by politicians who gained the contributions which they secured by solicitation from particular groups of business interests, on the understanding, explicit or implied, that the first care of the Government was to be for those particular interests.'

"What do we stand here for to-night, and what shall we stand for as long as we live? We stand for setting the Government of this country free and the business of this country free.

Defense of Business.

"In the words of Woodrow Wilson, I stand for setting the business and the government of the Commonwealth of Kentucky free, free from the machinations and the control of a coterie of lobbyists and corruptionists who at this hour unblushingly attempt to take both by the throat.

"The supreme power of the State and the nation is lodged in its legislative Assembly. Who is it in Kentucky with power enough to step between the people and their duly-elected servants and to boast that they can organize and dominate law-making bodies ever? Does any man believe that a private citizen, a modest lawyer, devoting the major portion of his time to the business of a couple of public service corporations, which, according to his own statement, paid him a little over a dollar a day apiece—has he this tremendous authority? This is a task never attempted before except by powerful interests operating through cunning and expert emissaries. Was it claimed that Mr. Beckham did this work? Nay, not so. He is but a stately man, a painted shield, behind which Richard W. Knott, Percy Haly and Sam Shackelford ply their nefarious calling. It is through him that they hope to get their long and cadaverous fingers upon the throat of a prostrate Democracy and the purse of a helpless people. Politics makes strange bed-fellows.

"A little while ago when Mr. Beckham, then a candidate for the Senate against Gov. McCreary, denounced this man, Shackelford, as the plunderer of his own party, as a sand-bagger of corporations, he told you that you dare not entrust any man in the Senate who was actively supported by the known representative of the Standard Oil Co., the Tobacco Trust and the Southern Pacific railroad. These men were hardly on speaking terms at the close of that campaign.

"In the course of time it became my duty, as chairman of the committee which investigated the affairs of the United States Steel Corporation, to expose the methods of John D. Rockefeller in securing control of the most precious deposits in America. Three times in one day I denounced by John D. Rockefeller, by his almoner, Frederick W. Gates, and by the corporation itself. I secured and produced the incriminating evidence which led first to a petition for the dissolution of the American Tobacco Company, and finally to the separation of that great combination into four more or less independent and competing concerns. As a result of the fearless discharge of my duties as a public servant Sam Shackelford is muzzled and collared and delivered, surly but obedient, to the hand that smote him, and to-day he is yoked with Percy Haly in the organization of legislative bottee and the control of legislative patronage, and in the conduct of Mr. Beckham's campaign for a seat in the Federal Senate.

Parts of the Party.

"Will the Democratic party in Kentucky permit Sam Shackelford and Percy Haly to name an ambassador from a free and sovereign State? Do the people of Kentucky wish to reach the ear or secure the favor of a Senator by paying obsequiousness to a Haly or a Shackelford? The Republican party owes its birth, its life and its death to special and privileged interests. Haly and Shackelford were an essential part of its organization and its being. For that reason the Republican press of Kentucky has already nominated Mr. Beckham and accepted the lobbyist and trickster as the essential and necessary parts of the program.

"Every wash day you read in the columns of the Lexington Leader that I am about to retire from this race, that I have mistreated and deceived Gov. McCreary, that Ollie James has organized a Federal machine for the purpose of riding me into place and power. Why do the Lexington Leader, the Louisville Herald and the Evening Post seek Mr. Beckham's nomination and my defeat? Either because they feel assured that if nominated he will be defeated, or because they find in him and his associates the ugly attributes of Republicanism under the convenient mask of Democracy. Who to-day stands as political godfather, philosopher, guide and friend, self-constituted apologist and panegyrist for this political triumvirate? Richard W. Knott and the Evening Post. And when and where was Dick Knott ever received into Democratic fellowship or commissioned to outline the policies for the party of Jefferson and Jackson, of Bryan and Woodrow Wilson?

"Were I to ask to-night who in all Kentucky has been the most inveterate, the most cruel, the most false and perfidious foe that Democracy ever had, the answer would come spontaneously from every Democratic heart—Dick Knott, of the Louisville Evening Post. No man can oppose any form of corporate or political iniquity without arousing the wrath of Richard W. Knott.

Support and Abuse.

"He supported McKinley, Taft and Roosevelt. He fought Bryan and he fought Parker. He supported Bradley and Bill Taylor, Yerkes and Belknap and Augustus E. Willson. He fought Goebel and he fought Beckham when Beckham was at outs with Shackelford, the Tobacco Trust and the Standard Oil Company. He fought Hager. Why this man who canonized Caleb Powers and wept on the shoulders of Bill Taylor when an outraged Democracy had made an outcast of that usurper, should suddenly find in Mr. Beckham all the beatitudes of his ancient Republican allies, is beyond my ken.

"I do not complain of his wanton and cruel assaults upon me. I do not believe that the Democracy of Kentucky will be moved by the coarse and vulgar abuse with which the flimsy columns of this Republican sheet reek from day to day. They will remember that no Democrat in public life is so upright or pure or blameless as to escape the envenomed pen of this servile and corrupt enemy to decency and Democracy.

"When William Goebel made the reform of corporate abuses the keynote of his campaign Dick Knott, then an alleged Democrat, in obedience to the interests which he served then and is serving now, instantly became a vicious and ranting Republican. "William Goebel was denounced as an assassin, a fannel-mouthed incoherent, a designing demagogue, and when tradition, slander, misrepresentation and falsehood all combined did not avail to shake the faith of the people in their valiant champion, this same Louisville Post became the intelligence and the herald by which armed assassins were notified that their presence was needed in the peaceful capital of the Commonwealth.

"Dick Knott's paper was the bugle call that rang through hill and dale and assembled those turbulent spirits who were shortly to make the seat of government a scene of chaos and disorder and at last of murder, and when they were encamped around and about the capital of the State and courts and General Assembly were menaced by their sinister presence, who defended the assembling of this so-called peaceful army? Richard W. Knott and the Louisville Evening Post.

"When the General Assembly were driven in terror through the capital, chased with naked bayonets through the streets of Frankfort, who condoned the monstrous outrage? Richard W. Knott and the Louisville Evening Post.

"When for the first time in the history of civilized government ruffians invaded the sacred temples of justice and reverend judges, the ermine upon their shoulders, were forced to flee for their lives and leave precious records pilaged by ruthless and brutal savages, who danced with fiendish glee while the damnable work was done? Richard W. Knott and the Louisville Evening Post.

Greedy and Voracious.

"When neither insult to the Legislature nor outrage to the courts did deter the dauntless man who went serenely on his way, without fear or reproach, who was it that reveled in every form of cruel, false and malicious slander, who fired the black and pitiless heart of murder, until the dastardly deed was done, and with a steel bullet crashing through his vitals William Goebel fell bleeding in front of the State House? Richard W. Knott and the Louisville Evening Post. As he lay there like the murdered Duncan, his silver body laced with his golden blood and all his virtues crying out like angels' trumpet tones against the deep damnation of his taking off, what ghoul, what hyena mangled that piece of bleeding earth and then blackened the memory of our mighty dead? Richard W. Knott and the Louisville Evening Post.

"Yet Mr. Beckham has deliberately selected and commissioned this creature as the head and front of a greedy and voracious triumvirate who hope shortly to prey upon a deluded party and a prostrate people.

"When Mr. Beckham expresses an opinion upon any public question or announces his candidacy for office, it must emanate first from the 'Evening Post.' In this fight his colors fly from a fortress reeking with corruption and dripping with the blood of a murdered Governor.

"I had a right to expect that this battle would be fought upon a Democratic field; that my opponent would meet me upon Democratic ground. I challenge his right to fire his guns from that black and forbidding fortress, or to stab a fellow-Democrat with a knife sharpened upon the flint heart of Richard W. Knott and dripping with the gore of butchered Democrats. It would be bad enough did this ugly emissary of all that is evil in Republicanism confine himself to the truth. His paper reeks with every form of transparent and deliberate falsehood. Its news columns are as false and as fabricated as its editorials. Reports purporting to come from one section are deliberately concocted in another.

"You are told that Mr. Beckham is met by vast and cheering throngs. Long before his arrival at the place of speaking, hours before he ever opens his mouth, you are told exactly what he said. The first edition of the Louisville Evening Post goes to press at 11:30. The other day Mr. Beckham spoke at West Liberty at 1:30, and yet two hours prior to that meeting the paper stated the building was packed to the doors and that a large crowd congregated on the outside.

"At Lebanon a gentleman closely identified with his campaign telephoned to this same Evening Post a detailed description of the number of persons who sat in rapt and motionless silence, and burst into thunderous applause, before the Court House doors were ever opened or a single man in attendance.

No Self-Solicitude.

"I do not complain that the columns of this sheet reek with every form of denunciation of me. I do not complain that I am subjected by it to every form of traduction and abuse as an official and as a man. I am painted as a sot, a demagogue and a faker, the super-seivable tool of the liquor interests. I seek neither commendation nor the support of the pandering to corruption and an apologist for murder. I wear his relentless hate as a badge of honor. This facetious viper, whose venomous tooth, but lately rankled in the lion heart of William Goebel is coiled, now ready to strike at any breast bared in the defense of popular government and the people's rights.

"How this Republican sheet must edify the amazed Democracy of Kentucky with the information that while I am a bold, bad man, Mr. Beckham is 'sweet and neat, with pretty little feet, and that he has never been kissed in his life,' and that he is merely as sane and safe as Knott's once beau ideal, William Howard Taft, that he is as coy and modest and retiring as that gentle and dove-like statesman, Theodore Roosevelt, and that he is nearly as careful of human life as Powers or Howard or Youtsey.

"Were I the only Democrat who had deserved by honest and faithful service the implacable hostility of Mr. Knott, were I the only Democrat who had fallen the victim of his deliberate perversion of the truth, there might be found somewhere a member of my own party who might come under the influence of his wiles.

"I am the last, not the first, to be honored by his opposition.

"The Fifth district has been represented for six successive terms by a man of superb ability; a clear-headed, clean and capable public servant. He has earned and he has received the continued commendation and support of a splendid constituency. I hope soon to see him the chairman of the great Committee on Appropriations. It is a fitting reward for faithful service and will redound to the honor and the material good of a great city and a great Commonwealth. Yet Richard W. Knott did not hesitate to blast and to blacken his name, and to distort the motives and belittle the services of your chosen Representative, Mr. Sherley.

Attack on Stanley.

"On September 2, 1906, he declared that 'Back of him (Sherley) the machine forces have been massed once more. Back of the machine forces are the saloon forces. Mr. Sherley's votes in Congress were applauded by the wholesale liquor dealers, by the whiskey men in politics, and they brought in line with him the local liquor interests, the saloons and the Beer Trust. He counts upon this aggregation to carry this Fifth district for Mr. Swager Sherley, the nominee of the machine, the defender of the machine, the representative in Washington of the liquor elements.'

"On September 30, 1908, he declared that Frank Fehr might as well be running for Congress as the Democratic nominee, Mr. Sherley.

"On September 14, 1908, 'The Evening Post' urges every friend of temperance, every friend of law and order, every man opposed to the complete subjection of the Democratic party to the liquor interests to vote for Mr. Kinkead.

"A few years ago the shattered and disheartened remnant of a Democratic organization was rallied by the courage, patriotism and the statesmanship of that indomitable little giant, Tom Marshall. The Democracy of the Union watched with intense and breathless interest the great fight he waged against Republicanism, entrenched in power for years and blatant in its insolent defiance. This hatred of corporate oppression, his insistent demand for reform, his clean life and his transparent honesty, maddened the malevolent soul of Richard W. Knott. Not content with defaming his own representative, he opened his mud batteries on the Democracy of three States at once. In an editorial of September 5, 1908, entitled 'Check Saloon Influences,' he said: 'Let the Democrats, therefore, vote for Watson in Indiana, Harris in Ohio, and R. C. Kinkead in the Fifth Louisville district, and against Mr. Swager Sherley.' In an editorial of October 9 he denounced the gallant Carmack, who came to the aid of Marshall and the Democratic ticket in Indiana, declaring that he was operating 'under the auspices of that good and great man, Tom Taggart.' As he is to speak for the Brewster Trust in Indianapolis, we suppose Mr. Carmack has recanted.

"He denounced John W. Kern, once a Democratic nominee for Vice President, and now a sitting Senator from the State of Indiana, as the subservient tool of the liquor trust, as a blunderer and a demagogue.

Calumny For Bryan.

"Bryan himself does not escape calumny at the hands of the head of this Knott-Haly-Shackelford triumvirate.

"On September 25, 1908, Mr. Bryan was cartooned on the first page of this abominable Post, carrying a banner reading 'No Prohibitionist Can Be a Democrat.' His belt was made of whisky bottles, labeled 'Booze,' the buckle was a beer mallet, and his breast was incised in a beer keg. On September 11, 1908, it declared that 'In Indiana it is now admitted that a vote for Bryan and the other Democratic nominees is a vote for the liquor interests, and a vote against reasonable regulation of the liquor traffic.'

"Mr. Beckham himself found no favor in the eyes of Richard W. Knott as long as he persisted in denouncing Mr. Shackelford, the Standard Oil Company and the Tobacco Trust. It was only after he found Sam and Percy and Cripps cuddled up together as peaceful and cozy as pups in a basket that he lifted his unclean hands in political benediction.

"This arch-enemy of Democracy, this traducer of Carmack and Kern, Harmon and Marshall, Goebel and Bryan is not only the panegyrist, but the dictator in this unique campaign. More than a year ago the Democratic editors of Kentucky, in convention assembled, outlined their policy toward the Democratic candidates in a resolution adopted without a dissenting voice. Realizing the necessity of choosing the best and the strongest standard bearer for the ensuing contest with the common enemy, and that it was no sham battle that awaited us—in the last presidential election Wilson's vote exceeding that of his two Republican opponents by a little over a thousand—and that in all probability the Republican party, determined and reunited, would contest every foot of the ground with the chosen champion of Democracy, they agreed to urge Democrats everywhere to select their candidates for the Senate with an eye single to his probity, his experience and his capacity.

"In a recent editorial the Louisville Times, looking beyond the first Saturday in August to the Idea of November, opened its columns to all the candidates in order that the people might the better judge in the selection of their champion for the final contest. Mr. Knott immediately took issue with the Democratic editors of the State. He assumed to speak not only for himself, but for the Beckham-Haly-Shackelford regime.

What the Woodcock Said.

"He declared that the Democratic party was indebted to Mr. Beckham; that it was in honor bound to support him; that it had no right to consider the qualifications for public service or the strength in his party of any other aspirant. He said: 'The one great duty that devolves upon Democracy this year is to punish the atrocious crime of bolting,' and said that since several Democrats had bolted Mr. Beckham, every other Democrat should support him, fit or unfit, strong or weak. This man who for twenty years has bolted every Democratic nominee, State or National, now assumes to act as supreme arbiter and censor of the conduct of every other Democrat. Just think of Dick Knott denouncing bolters! 'Great God,' said the woodcock, and away he flew.

"And how has the party and the country become indebted to Mr. Beckham? We know something of our duty to our country! We are taught in peace to live, and in war, if need be, to die for that country; but who ever heard of the country's obligation to any man? Who—except Dick Knott and the Louisville Evening Post? What has Beckham done for the party, or what has the party ever done to Beckham, to create this anomalous condition? What great service in peace, what great deed of valor in war, has placed the Democratic party under a deathless debt to Mr. Beckham? Why, we are told that the party some years ago managed to induce Mr. Beckham to kindly consent to take a nomination for the Senate, and, having been good enough to accept it once, it would be an act of base ingratitude not to offer it to him again.

"Kentucky once honored the greatest orator of ancient or modern times, a constructive statesman who was a paragon even among such mighty peers as Calhoun and Crittenden, Randolph and Webster, and yet they have inscribed upon the marble tomb of the Great Harry of the West his expression of gratitude for the honor conferred upon him by the proud people of Kentucky.

"The Democratic party placed the toga of Clay upon the shoulders of John C. Breckinridge. He was Adonis in love, Mars in war, Solon in council. 'Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself; An eye like Mars to threaten or command; A station like the herald Mercury; New light on a heaven-kissing hill; A combination and a form indeed, Where every god did set his seal To give the world assurance of a man.'

Gratitude of Breckinridge.

"And yet the great John C. Breckinridge lived and died bowing in humble gratitude to his countrymen for the great honor conferred by their partial favor. Carlisle and Lindsay, Beck and Blackburn, each expressed a sense of infinite obligation to a trusting people for that great and coveted distinction—a Commonwealth's ambassador to the most august tribunal on the reeling earth.

"When did the Imperial Democracy of Kentucky, its knee in supplication bent, humbly implore this mighty and towering figure, the great, unique and only John Crepps Wickliffe Beckham, to borrow a pair of tongs or pincers and to bend in bland and supercilious condescension and pick up the toga once worn by Crittenden and Clay? When did it transpire that Kentucky and Kentucky's Democracy became so eternally indebted to him for that oblique act, for the questionable distinction of being permitted to say that even Beckham is willing to represent us in the Federal Senate?

"When Mr. Beckham instructs Harry Sommers to inscribe upon the back of his speeches the legend that Democracy is indebted to him, he strengthens not his cause, but he outrages the intelligence, he insults the self-respect of the Democracy of Old Kentucky."

"Six years ago Mr. Beckham was told, and repeatedly assured, that he was the one and only Democrat in all the Commonwealth who could not be elected to the Senate. He was told that he might name the Senator, that any other Democrat save himself would be acceptable to the Democratic members of the Legislature. He was left to choose between the sacrifice of his own personal ambition and the immolation of a party that had honored him. Had he then said 'It is comparatively unimportant who the Senator is; it is all important what he is and what he stands for; my party's success is more precious to me than any personal ambition'—then, indeed, could he have claimed that a party and a country owed him a debt; but having secured that nomination by the most devious of methods, holding it by the most questionable of titles, he stood like the dog in the manger, until, as a result of the perfidy of Democratic representatives and the selfishness of a Democratic nominee, a Republican was invested with the toga of a Democratic Senator."

"He has exhausted every right, expressed or implied, legal or moral, he ever had to that nomination, and now, shrink and dodge and squirm as he may behind the specious fallacies of Richard W. Knott, he is forced to fight— he must win or lose on his merits; he must show the people of Kentucky that he deserves the distinction he seeks."

Beckham and Platform.

"At the death of William Goebel Mr. Beckham became Governor. He accepted without question the platform of his party. He earnestly professed his intention to carry out to the letter the policies of his great predecessor. Democrats all over the State accepted that profession without question. Mr. Richard W. Knott accepted his professions and for a time believed them."

"How did this same Richard W. Knott regard Mr. Beckham then? Free from questionable corporate alliances, unhampered and uncontrolled by lobbyists, tricksters and political apostates. As long as Beckham looked to Knott like Goebel or Bryan, Marshall or Carmack, Kern or Sherry, he received the same treatment and was honored by the same wanton and scurrilous abuse. Then he was neither wise or capable or strong. Then he was not followed by cheering throngs because he was not underwritten by Sam Shackelford. Then he was no part of a statesman because he found no favor with the interests. Then in the eyes of Knott he was weak, green and pitiful. On March 14, 1900, Knott declared:

"The rumor that Gov. Taylor intends to abduct young Beckham was probably started in order to keep the young thing from playing in the streets, and not even the most bitter enemy of the man in the ranks of the revolutionists believes that Gov. Taylor intends to become a child stealer. It was only after Beckham had been the choice of the Tobacco Trust; it was Beckham, the railroad's favorite, Beckham, the recipient of the secret and silent benedictions of Ryan and Rockefeller, who suddenly blossomed into the paragon of the age, the model for all the statesmen of his time."

"Mr. Beckham, the hope of a people under the shadow of a great tragedy, and stranger to the devious paths his feet now tread, shrink in the perturbed vision of this same carping Richard W. Knott to the proportions of a 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' We are told that he is being allowed to 'tend like he is posing as a governor by his nurses.' And on March 24, 1900, we are advised that 'Little Lord Fauntleroy has appeared in a new character and will hold the reins of power for a short time as Peck's Bad Boy.' And again on March 14, 'Young Beckham has been thanked by the pomp and circumstance of the supreme leadership, and this will please the young fellow as he continues to play and tend like he is allowed to pose as a sure-enough Governor of Kentucky by his nurses.'"

Then "Mister" Beckham.

On March 24, 1900, as a necessary defense to the sanctity of the courts, to the protection of legislative bodies, to the security of human life, and to the maintenance of the dignity and the honor of a great State, Mr. Beckham made use of the military and blood-thirsty hordes who had filled the Capital with terror and stained it with blood. Mr. Knott saw his peaceful army disbanded with buffed rage and vented his impudent fury, not upon Governor, but upon Mister Beckham."

"In a high-sounding fulmination Richard W. Knott, on March 23, 1900, said: 'Mr. Beckham, in an address to the people of Kentucky, attempts to justify his call for military assistance. The call would hardly justify a chief of police in ordering out his reserve forces.'"

"It could not impose upon any man, qualified even to play Governor outside of the kindergarten, and yet Mr. Beckham issues his orders to his retainers."

"How will the Democracy of Kentucky account for the strange reconciliation of Knott and Beckham? They are in the same bed now. Has Dick Knott cuddled himself into the arms of Lord Fauntleroy's dainty cradle, or has Fauntleroy leaped to walk, and with one dimpled hand in the cadaverous clutch of Percy Haly and other glued to the filthy and itching arm of Sam Shackelford, has he been led to the foul lair of Richard W. Knott? Has Knott gone up, or has Beckham gone down? How, in the name of reason, did they get together anyway? Has anybody heard of the reformation of the Louisville Evening Post? Dick Knott is as changeless as original sin in his advocacy of everything that is evil in our social, industrial and political existence. He is the same sinister exponent of homicide and crookedness, who yesterday hounded William Goebel to his grave, and then, hyena-like, attempted to devour his dead body and blacken his memory."

"Where are Fauntleroy's nurses now? Where are the true and valiant Democrats who stood around him in the hour of peril, fearless and devoted as a Swiss Guard? They are abandoned and betrayed; they are marks for the poisoned shafts of Dick Knott, victims of the machinations of Shackelford and Haly."

"Several thousand years ago a man by the name of Moses acquired an epithet of distinction for modesty; but as the real and only modest man, Moses must go away—back and sit down, upon the advent of Mr. Beckham."

"In this same Louisville Evening Post of July 1, I find the following authorized statement from this coy and shrinking statesman: 'Mr. Beckham stated that he would never cease to appreciate the Louisville Democrats who had declared in his favor in the face of pressure from other directions, and that he believes the conduct of this campaign will mark a new era in the politics of Kentucky and in the establishment of the best feeling between Louisville and the rest of Kentucky, that has been known in many years.'" anything: When the Democrats of Louisville agreed to kiss the hand that smote them, to kiss the foot that kicked them, to bow low to the malicious foe that for six years has cursed them, then he will kindly consent to permit three millions of fellow Kentuckians to treat them as civilized human beings and to receive them into that sweet fellowship which is known around the world among all Kentuckians."

"Mr. Beckham, nominated for the Senate under the auspices of Knott and Shackelford and Haly, will immediately inaugurate a new era of political, industrial and social good feeling."

"It will be most pleasing to the people of Louisville to know that their political cousins will come to see them some more when Beckham is Senator and Haly and Shack are satisfied. It will be cheering news to the merchants to learn that their customers from these surrounding counties will again deal in Louisville when Beckham gets back into office and Haly and Shack are in the job."

"Let us all join in singing 'Hail to the Chief,' and still more hail to the slippery three who have agreed to set this city upon the map of Kentucky."

Native Kentuckians.

"I have read, or somewhere I have heard it read, that the merchants and bankers and business men of this queerly city were, almost without exception, born and raised in the hills and dales of Old Kentucky, and there repose the ashes of their sacred and sainted dead; there still stands the old homestead, the house where they were born, to which memory fondly turns as the shadows are a little longer grown."

"I had foolishly fancied that their fortunes were built upon the success and the prosperity of a fertile region surrounding this proud metropolis, and its banks and mills and factories, its hostels and chambers of commerce, its vast and varied industries, were interwoven with the development of the rich resources of the mountains, and the beauty and fertility of the Bluegrass, and the rich harvests of the Pennyrile."

"I had fancied that the homes and hearts of the people of Louisville and the people of the Commonwealth were interlaced and interwoven by ties of common interests of kinship and of affection, that it was the wise and far-sighted policy of her capable business men to develop at once the wealth of the city and the resources of the State."

"Before I perused this remarkable fulmination I had vainly dreamed that the farmer, the miner and the merchant, throughout the State realized and accepted the wisdom of encouraging and developing the growth of great cities within and without the boundaries of the Commonwealth that they realized they must not only produce, but market that wealth which is the immediate reward of labor."

"In every part of this industrial Eden, known as Old Kentucky, and that the best market is your own market, a market within the gates of a sister city. At one time I vainly dreamed that Kentuckians were Kentuckians everywhere, and that it matters little, whether the journey in mountains or plains, in village or city, whether they reside in a stone front or log cabin, whether they were fine linen or hidden gray—these are but the incidents and accidents in the lives of one great people. I had thought that we were, that we are, and that we ever shall be, Kentuckians. Kentuckians to the manner born. I had fancied that the happiness, the wholesome welcome, the splendid hospitality, the courage and the country which sanctified and glorified the old Kentucky home was a common heritage to a common people to which, as brothers, all we might lay claim."

"Let us rejoice, let us reverently thank God that when ties of interest and of blood were sundered, that we still have the magic of Beckham's blessing and the bond of Haly's benediction. In my mind's eye I can see the long procession filing in solemn and farcical order before the throne which Mr. Beckham has erected to himself and his allies. I can see those Democratic beatitudes like a new faith, hope and charity, in the form of Beckham and Haly, can see the united and reconciled Kentucky bowing in infinite gratitude to the goodness of Beckham and reverently accepting the proffered benediction that falls from the soft and facile fingers of Percy Haly and the reeking palms of Sam Shackelford."

"To satisfy his insatiable ambition Mr. Beckham has for years insisted upon making one issue paramount, which he dreamed would array the city of Louisville against the country round about it. We were told in the columns of this same Evening Post in the beginning of the year, that it would be a fight of the country against the town, that the cities would advocate my cause and that the country would repudiate it. Finding that the allegiance of the planters and laborers throughout the State could not be shaken, they have attempted, by cajolery and deception, to compel an unwilling support in the city of Louisville, and they have sought to secure it by the cheapest trick, the most crooked and shallow demagoguery ever attempted in the history of this Commonwealth."

"Mr. Haly again assumed the role of a political Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde—in the country and wet in towns. In communities where they are united against the sale of intoxicating liquors Mr. Beckham is a rampant prohibitionist, one heralding Hobson in his war upon the demon rum. In the mountain counties he assures the people that he would rather destroy one barroom than to be a Senator. In the cities we hear the covert suggestion that to Mr. Beckham and Mr. Beckham alone must the lives for salvation against impending State-wide prohibition."

"He has constituted the Louisville Post and the Hon. Harry Sommers, of Elizabethtown, his press agents and authorized spokesmen. His opening speech is published in connection with the introductory address of Mr. Sommers and a choice bit of eloquence from his facile pen fills a box on the title page."

"No Mr. Knott and Mr. Sommers assure the people of Louisville that Mr. Beckham is the avowed and capable foe of State-wide prohibition; that it was to him alone that the distillers of Kentucky owe their escape from wholesale destruction; and it is suggested, with an implied and sinister menace, that if Mr. Beckham is not nominated to the Senate that their business shall pay the forfeit, not because of any injury to the public, but to satisfy the baffled rage of a discomfited politician."

"In a recent issue of this same Elizabethtown News Mr. Sommers says: 'Some of the liquor people are trying to hold Beckham responsible for the Legislature. Then they ought to give him credit for defeating State-wide prohibition.'"

"Mr. Beckham's monitions boast that he controlled that Senate, controlled it, I am told, two to one, and yet that Senate put the kibosh to State-wide prohibition. Was the defeat of State-wide prohibition made the price of the support of the liquor interests of Louisville? Under what name do you serve, Benjamin Speak or die? Are you wet or dry, Mr. Beckham? Are you for or against; the Hobson resolution? Will you, if elected to the Senate, espouse or oppose national prohibition? Did you aid or did you assassinate State-wide prohibition for Kentucky?"

"Which Beckham is to go to the Senate—the Dr. Jekyll of Harry Sommers and Dick Knott in the cities, or the Mr. Hyde of inveterate and implacable hostility to the liquor interests in the dry counties?"

"Whether a majority of the people of Kentucky are prepared to abolish or to tolerate the manufacture of intoxicating liquor within the bounds of the Commonwealth, I do not know. It is difficult to discern the trend of public opinion until the public have spoken. Just how dry or just how wet is the State of Kentucky I do not pretend to say, but this I do know: Kentuckians never and Kentuckians dry alike adore candor and courage. At one time they have followed the standard of prohibition and another they have demanded the highest measure of individual and personal liberty. This much I do know: differ as they may upon a moral issue, Kentuckians never and Kentuckians will rally to the standard of a coward."

"Mr. Beckham, in a double deal and playing a dual role, has at this hour lost the confidence of the advocates of temperance and the respect of the opponents of prohibition."

EXCELLENT FOR SHEEP

ALFALFA ALMOST INDISPENSABLE TO LIVE STOCK GROWER.

From Comparative Obscurity It Has Come Into Prominence During Last Ten or Fifteen Years for Breeding Animals.

(By R. J. KINZER.)

The use of alfalfa cannot be too strongly urged with sheep, either the breeding or fattening stock. As the method of farming has become more intensified and the open range grows less each year, an acre of alfalfa must be made to take the place of many acres of range pasture.

Sheep, being ruminants, are able to handle a much more bulky feed than horses. A breeding flock of sheep can be carried through the winter season very successfully with but little grain in addition to alfalfa hay. Ordinarily the first cutting of alfalfa is not as good for sheep as the second and third cuttings, as it is usually coarse and stemmy, and sheep do not eat these stems readily.

It is about as safe to pasture old sheep on alfalfa as it is cattle. They thrive on it, and make excellent gains; but sheep bloat easily and there is likely to be a little loss from this source. Lambs can be pastured on alfalfa with but little danger of bloat, and the way they grow on alfalfa is a delight to the shepherd. They should never be put on the pasture, when they are empty and hungry, and it is always well to allow them access to some dry feed and keep them off the alfalfa until the dew is off; also on damp days. A mixture of alfalfa and brome-grass or alfalfa and orchard grass is a safer pasture than alfalfa alone.

A flock of ewes and lambs can be grazed for a short time each day on alfalfa with but little danger of any loss.

Pure-Bred Ewes Wintered on Alfalfa Without Grain.

If a lamb-creeper can be arranged from the sheep corral to an alfalfa pasture, the lambs will soon learn what it is intended for and will do far better on it than if confined to a dry yard. Newly seeded alfalfa can be pastured with less danger of bloat than an old field, and the packing of the ground by the sheep passing over it is frequently a great benefit to the alfalfa.

As a roughage for fattening sheep alfalfa hay has no equal, and cases of bloat from the hay are exceedingly rare. It can be fed either whole or cut, and fed with grain. Many prefer this method of feeding, claiming that there is less waste by it. In feeding experiments nothing has been found for roughage that equals alfalfa for fattening sheep. In an experiment at the Kansas station, alfalfa and prairie hay were compared as roughages. In the test the grain ration was corn and cottonseed meal for both lots. Those receiving alfalfa hay made an average daily gain of .336 pounds per head, while the lot on prairie hay made only .188 pounds per head daily, the alfalfa lot making almost twice as great gains. The alfalfa seemed to give the lambs a better appetite and they were always ready for their grain, and as soon as their grain was cleaned up they were ready for the alfalfa.

MANAGEMENT OF RUNT PIGS

Excellent Practice to Place Them in Pasture by Themselves to Avoid Jostling and Crowding.

(By W. F. PURDUE.)

Some runts are naturally weaklings, while others are the result of injuries or underfeeding. The poor feeder will have more runts in his herd than the good feeder—no question about that.

We always place ours in a lot or field by themselves, where they will have good pasture, and a chance to eat their meals without being knocked and jostled around by their larger mates. The poor things never have half a chance when allowed to run with the herd, and in consequence they will never pay for the feed they consume.

By separating them, however, and giving these runts some special care they ought to return some profit.

Ground grain mixed into a thick slop with milk, is what the runts need, instead of an exclusive diet of ear corn. Then keep them free from lice, and provide them with warm shelter, so that all the profit will not be chilled out in damp or cold weather.

Working for Independence.

Give more attention to the orchard, the garden, the poultry and the farm animals, and it will not be necessary to worry so much over the general crops. With fruits, vegetables, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, pork and other articles of food raised on the farm for the family table it will not require very large crops to make you independent on the farm.

Protect the Birds.

Protect and shelter the birds as much as possible. A few wind breakers or thickets of brush on the farm give the birds a nesting place and they pay for it by catching many injurious insects.

MEN IN MIND IN HOPKINSVILLE

People of Prominence In The Pearl City of The Penny-royal.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH NO. 36.

A Merchant Who Has For a Quarter of A Century Helped Make Hopkinsville.

J. Thomas Wall, senior member of the firm of Wall & McGowan, is, in point of service, one of the oldest merchants in Hopkinsville. He was born in Trigg county, in 1854, on a farm. When he reached manhood, he went to Cadiz and worked in a store for awhile and then became deputy County Court Clerk for three years. After further experience in mercantile pursuits, having saved some money, he began to look about for an opening in a larger city and, like many Cadiz business men, naturally turned to Hopkinsville as the metropolis of a large section embracing Trigg county in its trading territory. By coming to Hopkinsville he could retain much of his Trigg county patronage, while building up a permanent trade in the city of his adoption.

J. THOMAS WALL.

In 1888 he made his advent into Hopkinsville's business circles, by becoming a partner in the newly formed firm of Pye, Dicken & Wall, clothiers. In time this firm became the Mammoth Clothing and Shoe Co., with Mr. Wall the guiding spirit. After four years, the company moved from the east side of Main street to the present stand on the south west corner of Main and Seventh streets. About this time Mr. Wall formed a new firm and J. T. Wall & Co. became leaders in their line for a period of 20 years. Two years ago Jas. D. McGowan was admitted to the firm, and the name changed to Wall & McGowan, and increased prosperity has come its way.

Not only in business circles has Mr. Wall been a factor, but he has been called upon to fill important official positions. In 1898 he was elected a member of the city council, and made an efficient and clear-headed public officer. Ten years ago he was chosen a member of the Hopkinsville Public School Board, and has discharged the duties of this position with such fidelity that he has been elected for the fourth term of three years.

Mr. Wall is at all times a wide-awake man of affairs, enterprising, alert and far-seeing. He is identified with several fraternal orders, but is especially active as a Mason. Mrs. Wall is also quite prominent in the work of the Order of Eastern Star. Of their three children, two live New York, Dr. Joe Wall and Mrs. G. W. Wharton. The last named, as Miss Rowena Wall, was one the most accomplished vocalists Hopkinsville has ever produced. Her singing attracted attention far and wide until her marriage a few years ago. A younger daughter is at the parental home on South Virginia street.

Lost a Leg.

Mr. P. E. Downer, a venerable citizen of the Fairview vicinity, had one of his legs amputated Sunday on account of gangrene. Mr. Downer is 70 years old and is the father of Mrs. J. E. Mosely, of this city.

Costly English Port.

More than $100,000,000 has been spent in bringing and keeping the port of Liverpool up to date.

GROCERY DAMAGED

By Fire Probably Due To Electric Current.

Thursday night about 2 o'clock H. M. Bollinger's grocery store, situated on the corner of Second and Railroad streets, caught on fire and burned for some time before the fire could be checked. The blaze was started from the lightning, which is thought to have struck the wires which run past the store and passed from them into the building.

The fire was seen by Harvey McCord, who tried to notify the fire department at once but did not succeed in getting them for twenty or thirty minutes. The flames were arrested soon after the department arrived.

Both the stock and the building were partially insured and $300 will about cover the loss.

FRANCHISE ENDORSED

By Rising Vote and The Council Asked To Order Its Sale.

The franchise prepared by City Attorney Southall from the Paducah street railway franchise and submitted by Mr. R. E. Cooper to the New York parties asking for a franchise, was returned Thursday and with some minor changes will be acceptable to them.

A called meeting of the H. B. M. A. was held Thursday night and the matter was thoroughly gone over by about 30 business men present and after being discussed, the franchise was recommended by a rising vote to the Council and a motion adopted asking that it be offered for sale within 30 days. The Council was to meet last night and the H. B. M. A. voted to attend the meeting in a body to urge its passage. L. H. Davis, Geo. E. Gary and A. H. Eckles were named as spokesmen.

Economic Epigram.

A sentimental declaration, even if it runs counter to sound economics and the best interests of society, will have more adherents than a profound truth in political economy, the adoption of which demands an immediate sacrifice.

RUTLAND IS RELEASED

Jesse Underwood Failed To Appear and His Bond Was Forfeited.

Jesse Underwood, of Empire, failed to appear yesterday to answer to the charge of shooting and wounding A. V. Rutland, and Judge Knight forfeited his bond of $500 and held him to the grand jury. A. V. Rutland, it transpired, was hit on the hip and slightly wounded when Underwood fired a shotgun at him. Both Rutland and Eugene Watson were released from bonds and the charge against them dismissed. They were arrested on Underwood's warrant and he did not appear to prosecute.

Miss Ruth Jarrett is visiting Miss Mary Thomas in Trigg county.

Miss Emma Leigh Cowherd, of Gracey, was in town yesterday.

Henry D. Wallace, Jr., who had been spending his vacation with his parents, left yesterday for his home at Houston, Texas.
